2016 IMPACT REPORT

For thousands of homeless children in Central Florida, summer break was going to be anything but a vacation . . . until Summer of Dreams came along.

The Reality of Homelessness

The face of homelessness is changing. The reality is that thousands of school-aged children make up Central Florida's homeless population. They move frequently – living with friends, in shelters, motels, cars . . . or even on the street. And when school adjourns for the summer, things get worse, because the structure these children depend on disappears. They don't have access to a safe environment, engaging activities and resources like the free/reduced lunch program, which provides many of them with their only two meals of the day. In short, they're robbed of the opportunity to just "be kids."

Summer of Dreams' Impact

Since 2011, Summer of Dreams has bridged the gap in critical resources for thousands of K-12 homeless students in Central Florida. With the help of public and private partners, the free 10-week program in Orange, Seminole and Osceola counties has provided:

- Two meals and a snack each day
- Weekend food packs
- Enriching academic activities
- Field trips
- Tutoring and mentoring
- A backpack of school supplies
- Financial counseling
